KINGWEN

2023 SPRING/SUMMER COLLECTION

Founded in London, KINGWEN was featured in the official schedule of London Fashion Week at its inception and was invited to participate in the second Hainan Fashion Week show in 2022. "KINGWEN" originates from an alternative interpretation of romanticism, exploring the classical Western art from oriental perspective. The brand's designs are inspired by mythology and cultural relics, and are brought to life by gradient fabrics and draping. Each of the brand's creations incorporates the sense of freehand like the flowers and birds in Chinese ink painting.

The founder, Claire Huang, graduated from Central Saint Martins majored in Fashion Design. Kingwen has worked for luxury brands such as Cartier, Thom Browne and Simone Rocha . Her designs have also been published in Vogue Italy, L'OFFICIEL, V MAGAZINE, etc. The brand now stays in close connections with various artists and celebrities.

VOGUE Interview

The Spring/Summer 2023 collection draws its inspiration from the image of Mi Fei, the goddess of Luo Shui, or the Goddess of Luo, who is a legendary figure in China's pre-Qin dynasty. Like the sun rising in the sunset, like a lotus flower emerging from the clear water. Bright as the sun rising in the sunset, burning like a lotus flower emerging from the straining waves." The Goddess of Luo is the embodiment of the oriental ideal of aesthetics. This collection intends to depict the ancient Chinese goddess in the oil paintings of the Impressionist Claude Monet, with the intention of exploring the Western imagination with an Eastern aesthetic. The goddess of Luo leaps out of traditional Chinese ink and wash paintings, wrapped in a halo of colour from ink and brush into Monet's mysteriously dense Impressionist canvases, appearing and disappearing like a light cloud over the moon or a flowing wind back into the snow. This collection continues the use of ink colours and oil brush strokes, tracing the beauty of women in a hazy fantasy world.
