

Completedworks

SS22

For SS22, Completedworks presents a collection of jewellery and vases as a continuation of an ongoing study into the deceptive natural of materials. Bold silhouettes flow elegantly and effortlessly in a series of pieces that present hidden creases, crumples and ruffles and explore the essence of texture and shape. Bio-resin imitates the natural baroque pearls used in traditional jewellery design and recycled glass mimics the visual properties of another more supple material such as fabric or foam.

Among the jewellery pieces in the collection are re-editions of some of the brand's signature pieces: Scrunch earrings recast in lighter and strikingly vibrant bio-resin forms; Parade of Possibilities pearl necklace and bracelet set re-issued with bio-resin 'baroque pearls' mismatched alongside their intricate freshwater pearl structures.

About bio-resin

The collection uses resin made from high bio-based carbon content such as soy-bean oil and cashew nut oil which are annually renewable resources.

About recycled glass

The glass vases in the collection are made from fully recycled sources, collected as discarded bottles and scrap windows and melted down and re-purposed using old engine oil as fuel.

About Completedworks

Completedworks documents the beauty and complexity of the everyday through the practice of jewellery and ceramics. Working primarily from recycled materials, the brand's signature pieces gently roll against the tide of convention - using sculptural forms that weave, loop, twist, flow, enfold and expand to explore broader questions about the human condition and trade blows with history, politics and the language of art.

Completedworks' pieces have been worn by brilliant women from many disciplines, including poets, artists, activists and actors such as Adwoa Aboah, Jodie Comer, Naomie Harris, Emma Watson and Maya Rudolph, as well as been auctioned in a contemporary designer sale at Christie's, New York. In 2021, Completedworks was nominated for the BFC Vogue Designer Fashion Fund.

Completedworks was founded by Anna Jewsbury, today she works with a larger team of diverse and complementary talent out of her studio in London.

For press enquiries please contact

amee@a-m-pr.com

69 Lisson St
London NW1 5DA

+44 (0)20 339 334 60

completedworks.com

@completedworks